

Betty Scholl is an artist specializing in acrylic abstract paintings that evoke strong emotions in the viewer. Her emphasis is on merging the color and light visible around us in nature and in ourselves. After receiving a Bachelor of Arts degree she began painting in New York, and then Los Angeles, where she studied for a year with John Corbeil. She has exhibited and sold paintings in California, where she won “Best of Show” in an exhibit at Marina del Rey. She has also sold and displayed her art in and around Virginia where she now lives and works near Charlottesville.
