

Artist Bio

Taylor Lee Bisbee obtained a double BFA in studio art and art history at Colorado Mesa University. He started school at Northwestern College as a graphic design major but quickly discovered that he was best suited for a fine art career. He then began to attend Northern Wyoming College and exploring the arts and building technical skills. Taylor moved to Grand Junction to grow in the printmaking arts and receive his BFA, while there he exhibited in many local exhibitions, and participated in projects to bring an awareness of the arts to the Grand Junction community. He has given demos on printmaking techniques and served as a teacher's assistant at CMU under Professor Joshua Butler. Currently, Taylor is pursuing an MFA at Colorado State University in Fort Collins Colorado. He is teaching beginning printmaking at the Fort Collins main campus and working as a gallery coordinator at the First National Bank Gallery.
