Chicago-based visual artist, Sarah Kaiser-Amaral has been driven at an early age by an inexplicable force to make art. Honing her painting and drawing technique since her childhood, she has blended her passion for painting with her teaching career, and inspires her students. She runs her own business, the Figurative Art League, out of her studio at the Noyes Cultural Arts Center in Evanston, IL. She has also been on the faculty of the Evanston Art Center since 2010. Sarah's evolution as an artist began after earning an MFA at the University of Chicago in 2003. Ever since, she has been exploring and pushing the boundaries of painting in her work.
