

Bio

Ryan McCoy (b. 1974) is an artist based in Washington DC. He works in various media but is mainly known for his large iconic paintings in which he structures meaning through specific materials to create personal iconographies about time, place, and memory. His work has been exhibited nationally and internationally, and is included in numerous private collections throughout North America, South America, Europe, and Australia. In 2016 he was selected for a studio residency at Arlington Arts Center, which will continue into 2022. He earned his MFA and BFA from George Mason University and teaches at various schools in the Washington DC metro area.