2015 M. Art. Ed. The Iceland Academy of the Art, Iceland. (My research; How can we motivate children to think about exotic things in nature through visual art projects? The project was based upon varieties of Discipline – Based Art Education projects with drawing and collaborative work in place-based education and with reference to integration of visual art and nature studies. I paid attention to work methods of some artists, including my own, who have made organic morphology or sustainable materials visible in their works as the core of the projects, the goal being to motivate the childrens' interest in exotic things in their environment and organic morphology from a broad perspective. Moreover, also to awake awareness amongst the children to respect the ecosystem and all of its inhabitants).
