

509 by Pamela Pecchio

August 9, 2010

By Jay Caetano

“509” a new photography book by Pamela Pecchio, is like going down the rabbit hole in a “Alice in Wonderland” episode – Pamela Pecchio brings out a world of exploration and cursorily in her photography.

As I turned the pages, every photograph had a story to tell about this family. Several questions popped into my head, as I stared at the photographs, but at the same time the answers were in the photographs. Every photograph is full of art, life and exploration. The photographs are a expedition for your mind.

This is a book you’re going to want to put on your coffee tables!

About the book:

509 is a portal into the familiar and familial. Detailed glimpses of a family home that hasn’t changed much in several decades. Why should it? Fads pass and new appliances are often poorly made. Wait long enough and that wall paper will come back into vogue. Leave this book open on your “modern” home’s coffee table and enjoy a window to the timeless. Music industry veteran and publisher Jefferon Holt of Daniel 13 Press invited photographer Pamela Pecchio into the home of his upbringing in Burlington, North Carolina two years after his Father passed away.

You can by the book at the photo-eye book store.