- Digital Media BFA student Hamilton Ward had his video Miss Addie Johns: Brewton, AL screened at the 2016 Indie Grits Film Festival in Columbia, SC. He created this work in ARTM 4901 Digital Media Projects 2.

2014-2015

- Graphic Design BFA student Jon Joyner received a Criterion Recognition for Creativity for his submission A Different Icarus, an animation created in ARTM 3101 Digital Media 2. This award came from The Humans in Space Art Program, which has regular calls for student art promote the International Space Station. This program is a partnership between NASA and CASIS (Center for the Advancement of Science).

2013-2014

Digital Media BFA students Zack Tompkins and Harry Nguyen were both awarded highly competitive volunteer scholarships 2013 SIGGRAPH in Anaheim, CA. Ashley Owens also attended in her role as Student Volunteer Team Leader.

Digital Media BFA students Zack Tompkins was also were both awarded competitive volunteer scholarship 2013 SIGGRAPH ASIA in Hong Kong. Ashley Owens also attended as a Team Leader.

2012-2013

Digital Media BFA student Ashley Owens received a third, competitive volunteer scholarship for the 2012 SIGGRAPH in Los Angeles, CA and was also made a Student Volunteer Team Leader.

2011-2012

Digital Media BFA students Ashley Owens and Giovanni Gutierrez were both awarded highly competitive volunteer scholarships to the 2011 SIGGRAPH in Vancouver, Canada.

2010-2011

Digital Media/Graphic Design BFA student Christian Anzola won a Golden Addy Award for a laser-cut woodblock print created in ARTM 3101 Digital Media 2.

Digital Media BFA students Ashley Owens and Giovanni Gutierrez were both awarded highly competitive volunteer scholarships to the 2010 SIGGRAPH in Los Angeles, CA. Owens also received a travel award from SIGGRAPH.

7.2 COURSES TAUGHT

7.2.1 GRADUATE COURSES

2005 – 2006 Clemson University. Clemson, SC.

Metrics by semester not maintained.

Course Descriptions

ART 821 Visual Arts Seminar on Art and Technology

Semester course, 4.5 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Studio course using the microcomputer as an art medium. Studies in imaging systems, with emphasis on the creative use of the medium for artistic expression. Essentially the same course as ART 321 but for graduate students in the Digital Production Arts program. Stress is upon basic composition and design skills as well as creative thinking. This course incorporated Photoshop, Illustrator, ImageReady and Flash.

AAH 864 - Critical Issues in Visual Rhetoric

Semester course, 3 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Seminar course exploring the relationship between art and technology in the age of electronic media. This course examines essays by Jennifer Helfand and other contemporary design theorists with critical discussions for the practical exploration of ideas relating to art, technology, and audience.

2002 – 2005 University of Kentucky. Lexington, KY.

Metrics by semester not maintained.

Course Descriptions

A-S 767 Graduate Studio Thesis

Semester course, variable contact hours, 1 - 6 credits.

Independent research and preparation for the M.F.A. thesis exhibition. For the student working in a highly technical medium or process, the preparation of a correlated written thesis under close guidance will be the outcome. The student will be expected to know the standard forms for photographic records and the preparation of a professional portfolio.

A-S 780 Problems in Design

Semester course, variable contact hours, 3 credits.

Sustained individual problems and experimental work in the technical and theoretical problems of design.

Students work in a variety of media investigating their own studio problems. Projects have included sculpture and print making students working in installation, a painting student exploring digital printing, and a painting student exploring web design.

A-S 793 Graduate Seminar

Semester course, 2 contact hours/week, 1 credit.

A seminar especially for graduate students in the studio area, in all areas of concentration. Lectures, discussion and criticism will focus on current formal and aesthetic problems in the arts. Emphasis will be placed on the integration of concepts arising in the different fields in the visual arts. Class time alternates between reading discussions and studio visits. Although I designate the first few readings, students are expected to choose and present readings of their own choice and interests as the semester continues.

A-S 795 Independent Research

Semester course, variable contact hours, 1 - 3 credits. ~1 student/year.

Advanced studio investigation of art forms, processes, and topics not specially treated in the regular curriculum. Students generally supplement their research with an undergraduate class not offered for graduate students. Graduate students have come to New Media Foundations, Installation and Web Design to this end. We also meet regularly to discuss their research and how it relates conceptually and formally to their work in the classroom.

Course Descriptions

ARTA 3800 Independent Study

Semester course, variable hours, 1 - 3 credits.

Supervised individual work in Art Studio. A learning contract will be submitted both to the chair and faculty advisor for approval. Independent research has included experimental sound, graphics and animation for video games, and game design.

ARTB 2103 Drawing 1

Summer session course, 16 contact hours/week (5 weeks), 3 credits.

This course presents the fundamental elements and principles of design as a foundation for all the visual arts.

It is a first-semester foundations course required for all art majors. The course broadens the beginning student's understanding of composition in terms of concept, methods, materials and technical skills.

Topics covered include seeing with specificity, line, texture, figure/ground relationships, light, value and volume, organization of the picture plane, proportion, spacial illusion, illustration of time and motion, drawing as expression and communication, and manifestation of the imagination.

ARTM 2105 Digital Media 1 (formerly: Electronic Media)

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Fundamental instruction in digital media as a creative tool. Students will learn the basics of digital collage using Adobe Photoshop, vector drawing with Adobe Illustrator, sound manipulation with Audacity and Garage Band and animation with Adobe After Effects. Students also learn to use flatbed scanners, USB microphones and various printers. Students develop and print digital images using Adobe Photoshop and Illustrator. They are introduced to digital audio by recording and mixing a contemporary poem which becomes the audio track for their final animation in After Effects. This course has incorporate Photoshop, Illustrator, InDesign, Audacity, GarageBand and After Effects.

ARTM 3102 3D Modeling and Animation (formerly: ARTM 3105 Topics in Digital Media: 3D Modeling)

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week 3 credits.

Introduction to 3D modelling and animation for studio art and graphic design students, using Blender 3D.

Students learned the basics of mesh modeling; sculpting; the application of materials and textures; UV mapping; lighting and camera operation; basic rigging, weight painting, and animation. As time permits, soft body physics, colliders, forces, or fluid dynamics are also introduced. This course incorporates Blender 3D and Adobe Photoshop.

ARTM 3101 Digital Media 2

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Intermediate to advanced instruction in digital media as a creative tool. Students learn advanced techniques for digital collage and GIF animation in Adobe Photoshop, use of Adobe Illustrator for the creation of laser cut sculptures, and Garage Band and After Effects for experimental time-based works. This course has incorporated Photoshop, Illustrator, Audacity, GarageBand, After Effects, as well as app Inventor, Gamesalad, and iBooks Author.

ARTM 3103 Animation (formerly: Animation and Interactivity)

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Instruction in the creation of animations and interactive animations and motion graphics; this class formerly included interactivity with Flash. Students learn the basics of frame-by-frame animation, tweening, sound in animation, and text animation. Formerly, the class included information design and interactivity using Action Script 3.0. Emphasis is placed not only upon the technical mastery of After Effects (and formerly Flash), but also on aesthetic and conceptual refinement. The class culminates in a 30-second ad, formerly in the production of a simple game. This course has incorporated Flash, Photoshop, Illustrator, Audacity and GarageBand, and now focuses on After Effects. Note: As of Spring 2011, Flash was abandoned due to lack of support on Apple mobile devices and shifts in local industry.

ARTM 3105 Video Art

Semester Course, 6 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

Students develop storyboards, shoot, and edit their own video works. They are instructed in shot composition, lighting, sequencing shots, issues in timing, and sound mixing. Studio work is supplemented by reading discussions and viewings of video art works. This course has incorporated Final Cut Pro, Premiere, After Effects, Audacity, and Garage Band.

ARTM 3405 Internship in Digital Media

Semester course, variable hours, 1 - 3 credits.

Non-salaried opportunity for students to observe, examine, and participate in the creative dynamics and procedural operations of an art organization, production house or other arts related business or expert craftsman dealing with digital media. Internships generally involved graphic design, although I hosted six interns myself for an animation project, plus a seventh for the marketing of the animation Pennipotens.

ARTM 4901 and ARTM 4902 Digital Media Projects 1 and 2

Semester course, 6 studio hours/week, 3 credits, classes to be taken sequential semesters.

Students are charged with developing their own studio practice, resulting in a complete and resolved body of work each semester. In the first semester, exploration, creative-risk-taking and development of a rigorous and regular studio practice are stressed. In the second semester, conceptual refinement is stressed along with development of the previous semester's directions in preparation for the BFA exhibition. In both semesters, students learn about professional practice, from submitting work to juried shows, to grant writing, to graduate school applications. The terminal semester of Projects culminates in the BFA thesis exhibition.

ARTZ 2104 Installation Art

Semester Course, 6 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

Students are introduced to the history and forms of installation art through readings, lectures, and the creation of their own installations. Students start with research presentations on installation and performance artists. They create a large scale "Cornell Box"; off-campus, site-specific works; environmental works in a small forest near campus, and finally create a process book based upon the semester's experience. This course has incorporated InDesign. Note: The Installation Art classes were shifted over to faculty in Sculpture and Ceramics before I had a chance to teach students in ARTZ 3104 Installation Art 2.

2005 – 2006 Clemson University. Clemson, SC.

Course Descriptions

ART 321 Art with the Computer

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Studio course using the computer as an art medium. Studies in imaging systems, with emphasis on the creative use of the medium for artistic expression. I approached this course similar to A-S 200 at the University of Kentucky and took note of how Prof. Sam Wang had previously structured the course. This course has incorporated Photoshop, Illustrator, ImageReady and Flash.

2002 – 2005 University of Kentucky. Lexington, KY.

Metrics by semester not maintained.

Course Descriptions

A-S 200 Foundations in New Media

Semester course, 8 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Fundamental instruction in digital media as a creative tool. Students learn the basics of digital collage using Adobe Photoshop for their first two projects. They are introduced to digital video and audio in the last project. Students are introduced to contemporary theory through readings, discussions and lectures. This course incorporates Photoshop and Final Cut Pro.

A-S 345 Web Design

Semester course, 8 contact hour/week, 3 credits.

An intermediate level course designed to teach students to create web pages. Emphasis is on creating functional and aesthetic web content within the current design parameters of the internet. Navigation strategies, directory structures and familiarity with networks is stressed. Students develop their site maps as they learn the software and designs are evolved to strengthen information design and aesthetic relationships to content. This course incorporates Macromedia Dreamweaver, Adobe ImageReady and Macromedia Flash.

A-S 347 Multimedia-Animation

4-week course, 16 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

An intermediate level course to teach students to author interactive media projects. Emphasis is on creating original, interactive, 2-D animation, and time-based projects that are output to CD-ROM. This course was revised to be specific to 2-D animation and utilized Adobe After Effects as the primary program. Students developed short animations (30 seconds to 1 minute) based primarily on technical and conceptual requirements. This course incorporates Adobe Photoshop, After Effects, and formerly Macromedia Flash.

A-S 390 Topics in New Media: Installation

Semester Course, 8 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Studio investigation of topics not specially treated in the regular studio course of study. In this case, students are introduced to the history and forms of installation art through readings, lectures and the creation of their own installations. Students spent the first part of the semester developing mock proposals for installations, both site-specific and concept-driven. Some of these proposals were inspired by in-class exercises exploring the nature of space and sensory perception. Finally students created site-specific installations, gallery-specific installations, and concept-specific installations. Open to Fine Arts students in all media including theater and music.

A-S 390 Topics in New Media: Video

Semester course, 8 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Studio investigation of art forms, processes, and topics not specially treated in the regular studio course of study. Students develop storyboards and shoot and edit their own video works. The final video project is a site-specific video or video installation. Studio work is supplemented by reading discussions and viewings of video work in the library collection and on-line video works. This course incorporates Final Cut Pro.

A-S 390 Topics in New Media: Advanced Digital Imaging

4-week course, 16 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

Students are introduced to advanced compositing and printing skills. The physical manifestation of the digital image -- such as in traditional prints, temporary tattoos, artists books, and collaborative image-making -- are explored. Students are encouraged to develop bridges between traditional studio materials, drawing techniques, the digital platform, and conceptual goals. This course incorporates Adobe Photoshop and Illustrator.

A-S 395 Independent Study

Semester course, variable hours, 1 - 3 credits.

Supervised individual work in Art Studio. A learning contract will be submitted both to the department and the office of the dean at the time of registration. Independent research has included feature length video work, experimental video, animation, graphic design, digital audio, web design, digital prints, digital print making for fiber arts, installation, and performance.

A-S 399 Experiential Education

Semester course, variable hours, 1 - 3 credits.

Off-campus studio experience outside the academic environment leading to significant professional growth. A formal learning contract among student, field supervisor and the department. Studio hours per week by arrangement. A written statement of objective, recommendation of a studio faculty member and the approval of the department chairperson and the Office of Experiential Education are required. Internships generally involved graphic design.

A-S 541 Graphic Design 4: Portfolio

Semester course, 8 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

Provides an opportunity for the advanced study of artistic and technical solutions for graphic design problems. Prospecting for employment, working conditions, avenues for advancement, pricing work, and the legal responsibilities of the artist-designer to the client-agency discussed. Students conclude this course with the presentation of a portfolio demonstrating their ability to do quality work which meets the highest professional standards. Students are also required to brand themselves and mock interviews are conducted to give them further experience in how to present themselves and their portfolios in a commercial setting. Software incorporated is variable depending on the individual student's portfolio.

2002 Youngstown University, Youngstown, OH. Part-time Instructor

Course Descriptions

Graphic Design I

Semester course, 6 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

An introductory course in the basic concepts of graphic design theory including layout and organization of space, the elements of visual communication and the process of presentation from thumbnails through comprehensives. This is a required course for all studio art majors. I introduced students to graphic design using traditional drawing materials before introducing them to Adobe Illustrator and Quark. Assignments included typographic experimentation, logo design and page layout.

2001 - 2002 Allegheny College, Meadville, PA. Visiting Assistant Professor

Metrics by semester not maintained.

Course Descriptions

FS102. Freshman Seminar: Art and the Scatological

Semester course, 2 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

This is a writing and debate seminar required of all freshman. Students develop their persuasive writing and speaking skills through essay assignments, persuasive speeches and group debates. The specific topic of each section is at the instructors discretion. Inspired by my future proximity to Cincinnati and its lively art history, I decided to base the course on the influence of fecal imagery in art. Students are instructed on methods of analyzing works of art and are evaluated by their oral presentations, written work and class participation.

Art 151 Drawing I

Semester course, 4 studio hours/week, 3 credits.

An introductory course in drawing, including a variety of media and projects to develop skills in observation, execution, and the understanding of drawing as an art form. I spent in-class time focusing on technical exercises and critiques and left the more expressive assignments as out-of-class work.

Art 155 Introduction to Studio Art, The Creative Process

Semester course, 4 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

This is an introduction to studio art which includes studio projects in two and three dimensions. Readings and discussions unite with art making to explore creative ideation and investigate the imaginative sources which contribute to the world of the visual artist. Because faculty were encouraged to incorporate their artistic "specialties", I organized this class to progress from large charcoal drawings to an artist's book and finally to a site specific installation/performance. These projects were supplemented by smaller "warm-up" assignments, lectures, slide/video presentations, group critiques, and individual meetings.

Art 285 Computer Art I

Semester course, 4 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

An introduction to the digital computer as a medium for artistic expression through studio projects and a study of the history of computer art. Macintosh computers, scanners, and printers are used together with Adobe Photoshop to create high-quality color images. Adobe Premiere is used for video capture. Time-based and interactive work is created with Macromedia Director. Emphasis is placed throughout on the development of well composed and expressive work. The first project was a hand-rendered drawing, which was retouched in Adobe Photoshop to create a completely new drawing. Following this was a photo collage based on the concept of the "Human-Made Human", and the last piece was a short animation created in Macromedia Director, inspired by a work of Art.

1999 - 2000 Rutgers University. New Brunswick, NJ. Graduate Student Instructor of Record

Metrics by semester not maintained.

Course Descriptions

07:081:102 Art Making, Section 4, Video

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

An introduction to the fundamental concepts of working in video. Classes are devoted to technical demonstrations, screenings, discussions, work on projects, and critique of the resulting works. Because of the intensive nature of this course, and limited resources (6 cameras for 25 students and no editing equipment) I focused on shooting techniques, story boarding, and time-based arts appreciation. Students collaborated on writing and shooting (in sequence) short pieces which we discussed as a class.

07:081:123 Drawing Fundamentals 1

Semester course, 6 contact hours/week, 3 credits.

Examination of the techniques, materials and ideas of drawing, with emphasis on discovery, experimentation, and personal expression in relation to concepts and images in art. I created projects that would introduce beginning students to line, value, perspective, figure drawing, etc; and challenge the more advanced students conceptually in terms of their subject and object matter and how they composed their images. I also lectured on contemporary art, from traditional drawing and painting to installation and video.

Not applicable.

8. SERVICE AND OUTREACH

8.1 ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Fall 2016 - Spring 2017

D-Arts Co-Director (June 2014 – present)

- Worked with CCB Gallery Director Crista Cammaroto on the exhibition Digital Dialogues. The show featured D-Arts funded student and faculty projects, and took place in the Center City Building's front windows and Projective Eye Gallery. Summer 2016. (See II.K. Bibliography/Published Mentions and III. G. Student Accomplishments.)
- Got P-Card Training and acquired card for D-Arts purchases, Fall 2016.
- Managed all D-Arts activities while Co-Director Chris Beokrem was on a Reassignment of Duties.
- Met frequently with Co-Director Chris Beokrem (School of Architecture) in Summer 2016 before his RD in Fall 2016. Revised Faculty Digital Grant structure.
- Met with Chris a few times in Spring 2017; Chris took over grants purchasing for that semester.
- Funded three collaborative D-Arts Student Digital Making Grants in Fall 2017 (one in Architecture, two in Art & Art History).
- Funded two collaborative D-Arts Faculty Digital Making Grants for Fall-2017-Fall-2018. (One in Dance, one collaboratively between Art, Dance, and Music.)

Member, CoA+A Graduate Arts Committee

- Met roughly every other week to develop an interdisciplinary graduate arts degree housed with CoA+A.
- Duties included researching existing graduate arts programs within the state and region, identifying aspirational graduate arts programs at other universities, identifying faculty working in community engaged creative practices and potential partner institutions, and drafting course sequences and descriptions.
- As of writing, the committee is preparing documents for the market study and intends to have a proposal to the Dean by the end of the start of May.

Spring 2016

Organized and hosted the Women and Video Games Festival February 15th – 21st, 2016

- Full program at <http://womenandvideogamesfestival.blogspot.com>.
- I was lead organizer; collaborators were Robert Campbell (CoA+A, Art & Art History), Dr. Celine Latulipe (CCI, Software & Information Systems), and Kathleen Bradley-Volz (CLAS, Women and Gender Studies). CPCC's Dr. Farhad Javidi (Director, Simulation and Game Design Program) organized concurrent events on their Levine Campus.
- Festival included nine individual talks and panel discussions, three workshops, two video game jams, and one video screening on the UNC Charlotte Campus, with seven additional talks and workshops at CPCC.
- Keynote Speaker: Anita Sarkeesian, internationally renowned feminist game and media critic who put a spotlight on rampant sexism in the game industry and among gamers themselves during the notorious #gamergate. Ms. Sarkeesian's lecture "I'll Make a Man Out of You: Redefining Strong Female Characters" took place on February 18th in McKnight Hall; over 400 people attended. Due to previous death threats against Ms. Sarkeesian, I worked closely with her agent and campus police to assure security at the event.
- Featured Speaker: Ubisoft - Studio de Québec's Narrative Director Melissa MacCoubrey, who wrote the ground-breaking transgender characters in Assassin's Creed – Syndicate.
- The festival was funded by a Chancellor's Diversity Challenge Grant, and through contributions from the College of Computing and Informatics, the Department of Art & Art History, The Center for Professional and Applied Ethics, The Digital Arts Center (D+Arts), the College of Arts + Architecture, and the Center for Teaching and Learning.
- The second edition of this, Diversity in Video Games is planned for Spring 2017.

2014 - Present

Co-Director with Chris Beorkrem (Architecture) of D+Arts, CoA+A's Digital Arts Center

- I started working with D+Arts in 2008 while it was under the Directorship of Eric Sauda (Architecture).
- Chris Beorkrem and I started Co-Directorship July 1st, 2014.
- We organized D+Arts faculty and student "Digital Making Grants" which were peer reviewed.
- In 2015-2016, we expanded funding for student "Digital Making Grants".
- We are working with Projective Eye Gallery Director Crista Cammaroto on an exhibition of D+Arts funded student and faculty projects (scheduled for July 2016).
- We are working with CoA+A faculty to structure longer-term, more community-engaged collaborative projects.

2012 - 2014

Chair and then Member, University Part-Time Faculty Committee.

- 2012-2013, elected Chair to the Part Time Faculty Committee.
- Commented on and suggested revisions for the 70-page Part-Time Faculty Handbook.
- Collected contact information for part-time faculty from the entire university for the previous two years; created and conducted a survey of those individuals regarding work-life balance, and issues related to employment at UNCC.
- Created draft recommendations on policies affecting part-time faculty.
- 2013-2014, stepped down as chair and became committee member.
- Concluded the initial review of the Part-Time Faculty Hand Book and continued analysis of the Part-Time Faculty Survey. Committee continued evaluation of the data in Fall 2014.
- Committee recommendations submitted to Faculty Council.
- Part-time faculty mentoring, parking discounts, library benefits, and other system adjustments were made based upon the committees' recommendation.

8.2 EXTERNAL SERVICE

8.2.1 INVITED TALKS, MASTER-CLASSES, COMMUNITY PERFORMANCES

Also see section 4.3 PEER REVIEWED CONFERENCE PUBLICATIONS/PRESENTATIONS.

2016

Panelist on the "Future of Southern Documentary" at the New Frontier Day Lab at the Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts + Culture. Panel Chaired by Diane Robertson, interim Executive Director of the Southern Documentary Fund. Invited by Kamal Sinclair, Director of the New Frontier Lab Programs, Sundance Institute.

8.2.2 JOURNAL/CONFERENCE/COMPETITION REVIEWER

2017

Juror for Charlotte Film Festival. Asked by organizers the Charlotte Film Festival (International) to review and comment upon one animation.

2016

Book Proposal Reviewer. Reviewed one book proposal for Bloomsbury Academic; compensated.

US Collegiate Archery, Level 1 Coach. October 2013, on-line.

2016-2017 - Club Achievements

Member, USA Archery North Carolina Advisory Committee. I was elected to USA Archery's inaugural Advisory Committee for the State of North Carolina. USA Archery oversees the US Olympic archery team and promotes archery natural. Our committee will advise the State Coordinator in coordinating the state archery championships with qualified clubs. We will begin 3-year rotating turns. (My rotation off to be determined.)
- About a dozen Students from Appalachian State and Wake Forest attended, along with about eight of our own students.

2015-2016 - Club Achievements

- 1) Fall 2015, three students represented UNC Charlotte at the first North Carolina Collegiate Field Archery Shoot in Yadkinville TN.
- 2) Spring 2016, five students attended the second NC Collegiate Field Archery shoot, again in Yadkinville TN. The UNC Charlotte team came in second place, and archers Chirag Patel and Patrick Thewlis took first and second place in the men's recurve division.
- 3) UNC Charlotte hosted its second intercollegiate "fun shoot" with 16 students from three North Carolina universities attending.
- 4) The club now has about twenty active members each semester, almost 250 on OrgSync, and competition equipment adequate for about 20 shooters (all olympic recurve bows).
- 5) The club is currently seeking funds for compound bows, and planning the training all club officers to be USA Archery Level 2 Coaches

2014-2015 - Club Achievements

- 1) Club acquired its second Easton Foundation Grant ($780) for Level 2 and 3 coach certification.
- 2) UNC Charlotte hosted its first intercollegiate spring shoot, the first intercollegiate archery event in the state's history.
- 3) Thirteen students from three UNC Universities attending, including one JOAD (Junior Olympic Archery Development) program archer. As the faculty advisor and coach, I worked with campus Legal, Risk Management, Security, and Parking to assure we could legally and safely host the competition.
- 4) I ran a Level 1 Certification clinic for two club officers; both successfully passed the exam.

2013-2014 - Club Achievements

- 1) The club was awarded an Easton Foundation equipment grant ($3,500).
- 2) I began training all new members in range safety and basic recurve shooting techniques.
- 3) 113 members on OrgSync as of March 2014, making UNC Charlotte Archery Club the fastest growing student athletic club on campus.

2012-2013 - Beginning of the UNC Charlotte Archery Club

- 1) I started working with the UNC Charlotte Archery Club students to develop their program.
- 2) The club had about eight members, who borrowed a single target, three children's bows, and about a dozen arrows from a summer camp about once a month for practice.

9. LEADERSHIP

Research Leadership: My animations, digital prints, and mobile apps have exhibited in solo and group juried shows nationally and internationally, and I have presented my creative works at regional conferences, and are well regarded for their handling of motherhood and parent-child relationships.

Teaching Leadership: Since I teach in digital media, I have taken the lead in learning new software skills not otherwise covered by my colleagues in order to assure then currency of our course offerings. I have made substantial changes to both software covered and project assignments to better prepare students for both applied fields and fine art studio practice.

Service Leadership: I was the Lead Organizer of UNC Charlotte's first Women and Video Games Festival, which took place February 15th-21st, 2015. See 8.1 ACCOMPLISHMENTS. I am also Co-Director of D+Arts, a CoA+A a college center charged with promoting collaborations across the collage utilizing digital technologies, and I regular contribute to department committees.

11. RESEARCH STATEMENT

When I came to UNC Charlotte, my work explored the language and symbolic forms of science and where these intersected with mythic, religious, and popular iconography. The birth of my son Quinn in 2008 and the death of my mother in 2010 caused a shift in my artwork as I sought to redefine my “new normal”. I still explore the iconographies of myth systems, but these are considered through the lens of motherhood, and my ever-shifting understanding of parent-child relationships. Materially, I join digital with analogue technologies, often combining hand rendered drawings and watercolors with 3D models; or drawing and painting on top of digitally printed photo composites. My research interests have tracked a parallel course to my teaching and have gradually shifted from digital print to moving imagery over the last ten years.

My exhibition record since coming to UNC Charlotte is excellent; while prior to tenure I focused on gallery exhibitions of my print works, my animated works have found equal success in film festivals. My prints, animations, and mobile apps have appeared in highly competitive venues and received numerous awards. In terms of sheer numbers, I participated in well over thirty solo, two-, and three-person exhibits since coming to UNC Charlotte, and won over twenty awards, mostly for my animations. Since receiving tenure and promotion my research has focused in on moving imagery, which includes the creation of animations such as Pennipotens, Quinn's New Video Game, and the 3D printed stop motion Artemis. I have also developed the animated and interactive mobile apps Denisovan and Flederhund, the latter being a collaboration with Associate Professor Jeff Murphy.

In 2013 I was approached by Fairchild Press (an imprint of Bloomsbury Academic) to write an introductory level textbook on animation. As a self-taught animator, research for the book deepened my understanding of moving imagery in a way that immediately impacted my research and aided my teaching (discussed in the text section). Moving Image Workshop: Introducing animation, motion graphics and visual effects in 45 practical projects was published in December 31st, 2015; it is 288 pages with 200 color illustrations, and covers the history of animation, the twelve fundamental principles of animation, pre-production, composition and design for moving imagery, character animation, kinetic type, motion graphics and visual effects, experiments in animation, and professional practice. According to Worldcat.com it is held in 54 libraries in eleven countries, and Fairchild Press is also currently negotiating its translation for the Chinese market.

12. TEACHING STATEMENT

I often remind my students that they are not so much “art students” as “artists and designers who also happen to be students”. Prior to tenure, my focus was on encouraging students to attend professional conferences such as SPE and SIGGRAPH, and helping them prepare their portfolios for internships, employment, and exhibitions. In recent years, I started requiring students to submit works to exhibitions, and I guiding them through the application process. Project assignments challenge students both technically and conceptually and are based upon real studio problems I have encountered in my own creative and professional practice. At the same time, the contents of my courses have necessarily shifted along with changes to software, hardware, and trends in art and design.

While our own Digital Media BFA students pursue research in digital images, animation, and interactivity, our area still functions primarily to serve other concentrations. While this has limited our ability to expand the program, it has also provided a marvelous mix of student interests and backgrounds, and granted us unique opportunities to impact the creative development of students from across the department.

I have made substantial changes to both software covered and project assignments to better prepare students for careers in applied art and fine art studio practice. For example, in Fall 2011, I added a laser fabrication assignment to Digital Media 2 after gaining access to the laser cutters maintained by the School of Architecture. Concerned about the absence of 3D modeling and animation in our curriculum, (and having no prior experience with the stuff), I started learning Blender 3D in 2010. In Spring 2011 I taught a topical class on 3D Modeling and Animation, which is now a regular offering in the curriculum.

The Animation class also made a radical shift shortly after I received tenure. I set aside Flash for After Effects, as mobile device support for Flash waned, and local design firms moved away from the software. While I was remiss to lose scripting as part of the class, the shift to a more focused consideration of animation, motion graphics, and visual effects greatly improved the resulting class projects, and directly informed the writing of Moving Image Workshop.

Finally, I now team-teach the senior Digital Media BFA Projects classes with my colleagues in Photo Media and Print Media. Digital Media Projects was previously stacked with Animation, which was highly ineffectual; Photo and Print Media struggled with the same problem. By combining studio concentrations at this level, we have greatly professionalized our respective concentrations.
