Personal Statement:

My paintings are meant to be pleasing to look at, and at the same time intellectually stimulating. For some, they are what they are--a window, a roofline a door ajar. For others, owing a large degree to my use of close perspective, they are thoughtful abstractions of lines and surfaces caught in the push and pull between what's near and what's far away. I elevate the simplicity of my subjects and invite my viewers to reach their own conclusions.

"Other works are simply so finally detailed that they might as well be photographs. In this category look for Peter Hussey's lovely architectural study that will have watercolor enthusiasts shaking their heads in admiration."

Bill Van Siclen, Arts Writer, The Providence Journal, March 2013
