Temporarily departing from the UBS 12 x 12 series tradition of featuring work from one up-and-coming artist at a time, this month the MCA welcomes back five noteworthy past participants. Laura Mosquera, whose pieces can currently be seen brightening up the dim Chicago Red Line station, is a standout here with Only You Could Know — a painting focused on groups of disconnected people who all stand amid the same, subtle setting. Greg Stimac's gigantic photos of gun owners across America also call immediate attention, particularly one of a trio of young children at shooting practice with shotgun shells scattered around their feet.
