

Objects speak to me in the poetry of form: shape, color, value, rhythm, and texture. Through quiet contemplation of the ordinary I find geometries that align to form secret meanings. Direct observation is always fooled by memory and association, becoming an exercise in questioning what one is seeing. I am fascinated by the magic of pigment becoming a private, intimate space.