The Eve of Over The Phine

Everybody's doing it—even EveryBody's News. That is plugging Over the Rhine and its soon-to-be-released recording, eve.

Since early August, the local have media been trumpeting OTR as the area's potential NBT (Next Big Thing.) That's because the first group's full-fledged recording for the national label, I.R.S. Records, will be released next Tuesday, Aug. 23.

Various local alternative radio programs and stations havebeen working an advance single from eve and revisiting a short list of tunes from the group's previous recordings.

Truth be told, there was a time, not so many years ago, when EN was not jumping on the band's wagon but actually helping to build the wagon with its coverage of the now-five-year-old group's exciting early shows and first two recordings.

In EN's annual "Year in Music" issue for 1991, Overthe Rhine was named "Band of the Year." The following year, EN picked OTR as "Best Folk/Pop Group." No brag about it: You read it here first.

Now you're reading it here again. The "buzz"-about the new release is strong, especially if you've heard any of the newer material in concert in recent months or caught the single, "Happy with Myself?" on local alternative radio.

The group will mark the release of eve with a free concert in Eden Park on Aug. 22.

"Tome, the word 'eve' means several things: anticipation, being on the edge, the coming of night," said drummer/percussionist Brian Kelley in a recent phone interview.

"Personally, Irelate it to what we're going through at the moment. We're at a possible turning point in our careers. So of course we're wondering, worried, and excited."

Interestingly, the new album finds the electro/acoustic modern rock group not only being plugged but also getting plugged in—and just when it seems fashionable for electric groups to go the other way!

But according to Kelley and vocalist Karin Bergquist, OTR doesn't forsake its trademark amalgam of acoustic-based folk/pop/art rock. These members simply see this phase as an extension of themselves.

For fans of the group's warm and lushly romantic second gladly let go of is an obsession for perfection.

"I'm a firm believer in first takes," she said, admitting that some songs did require a second or third take. "It's a lot easier on us and our sanity, believe me.

lieve me. "This attitude makes [eve] closer to our first album ('Til We Have Faces)", added. "But when we did that one, we were nervous about letting the imperfections get out. Now, more ready to we're much flaws.

Kelley said that the group, which is keen on depth and dynamics, still likes to work with the spaces inits songs. He noted that while he and guitarist Ric ("c" as in "cello") Hordinski are much more out front this time, they are all working together more fluidly, filling in holes and smoothing out rough spots.

"I played more 'ghost' notes on the snare, things like that, to give the songs more color and texture," Kelley pointed out. "Yet, my playing is more urgent when it needs to be."

Obviously, going with the flow enabled OTR to work more quickly. The mastering of 16 songs—which took place in a studio outside of Boston—went down in four weeks. Then the mixing sessions, at renowned producer Daniel Lanois' New Orleans studio, Kingsway, took two more. The result: 11 final songs (plus the CD hides a bonus track) and several candidates for a five-song CD EP.

As you might expect with an album named eve, which indirectly calls to mind that famous lady from the Garden of Eden, there is also a definite woman's touch to the new recording. And it's no accident.

Notably, one of the two coengineers was a woman, Kingsway's house engineer, Trina Shoemaker. Also, Bergquist wrote lyrics or music for eight of the 12 songs this time, expanding on the humanistic vision of OTR's principal songwriter, bassist/keyboardist Linford Detweiler.

"I really shouldered my way
in there among all those boys,"
she says, laughing mischievously. "But it wasn't really competitive at all. We collaborated very naturally, much more than before.

"On one of the tracks, called 'Melancholy Room,'" she continued, "Ric wrote the melody for the chorus, and I wrote the melody for the verse and prechorus."

Bergquist said they had been playing a stronger live version of the song for some time. But, she added, when she and Hordinski put down the vocal with acoustic guitar in the studio, "something very different and magical happened."

Collaborating with the two co-engineers, Shoemaker and Gene Andrusco, also helped the group to realize its vision more fully, Bergquist said.

"Trina is very knowledgeable and passionate about music, and she's famous for throwing up mikes and getting the live take on the first shot." she said.

"Gene has a strong musical ear, too, But most of all, I really appreciated his laid-back style," Bergquist added. "He observes and listens, and doesn't jump in. But if you ask his opinion, he always answers honestly. That's a great help."

An added treat on the CD version of eve is not just the bonus hidden track, "Bothered." It's also the session player who sat in on the song, Cincinnati's cutting-edge jazz bassist/composer, Chris Dahlgren.

"Linford and Karin invited me up to Massachusetts, and I was happy to find them open to letting me do what I wanted," said the now-New-York-based bassist in a phone interview from Colorado.

"Ilove the sound of [upright] bass with a female voice, especially one such as Karin's," Dahlgren continued. "She uses a lot of airy, back-of-throat sounds that work well with bass. Working from a simple chord chart, I tuned into the sound of her voice and set up a vibe, and her vocals came through very simple, pure and crystalline."

And that seems to be the group's musical mission: to keep everything simple, but always genuine and engaging. "Our music is constantly changing." Bergquistsaid, noting the group's desire to achieve a distinctive style. "Whatever happens and gets documented will always be a true representation of what we are."

Inspite of some understandable jitters, the group does seem to be "happy", with itself, and Kelley said it hopes to be even happier. "The airplay we've been getting with 'Happy...' is cool because it's our first official single," he said with a glimmer in his voice. "We hope to be driving somewhere on tour soon and catch it on the radio."

Over the Rhine's free "Eve of eve" concert will take place in Eden Park on Monday, Aug. 22, at 8 p.m. Also, there will be an "after-release" party at Kaldi's Coffee House and Bookstore, 1204 Main 51.

Over The Rhine (from L to R) Karin Bergquist, Linford Detweiler, Brian Kelley and Ric Hordinski, Photo by Michael Wilson.

album, Patience, the pronounced edge may be initially disorienting, while for followers of OTR's live shows it will be quite familiar-and easy to

"The 'new' sound is not new to us. We've been living and working with it for quite awhile," said Kelley, describing the group's evolution in the three years since the recording of Patience. "It's more

what we are than we've gotten dio programmer, Mike Boberg, recalled his own differing impressions of "Happy..." from a live show that preceded the

the Emery (Theatre) show this year, the song was pretty rockin'. But their shows are like that, so it didn't seem unusual.'

said Boberg who oversees

WVXU's nightly alternative more. I like the fact that it kicks

but still has a laid-back feel.

Besides, [Karin's] vocals work

In a later phone conversation, Bergquist added another perspective. "We're able to explore a wider range of emotions," she said of this new edge, "by not suppressing

some of the 'growling demons'

in ourselves and letting those come out in the lyrics and mu-

However, as Bergquist

noted, one demon OTR has

on just about everything."

"Then, when the station got the promo copy," he contin-

"it seemed to jump out

rock show, "Nightwaves."

When I saw the group at down on tape before."

Bearing this out, WVXU ra-embrace.

Celebrate Cincinnati's Original Oktoberfest.

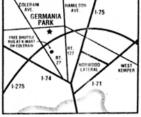

Cincinnati's original, authentic Oktoberfest is a frenzy of fun for the whole family. Authentic, continuous music and folk dancing. Games, fides and door prizes. Delicious German and domestic beer. And a tantalizing array of authentic, homemade dishes and desserts including full German dinners served in the Klubhaus.

Come celebrate Cincinnati's heritage in the spacious, comfortable setting of beautiful Germania Park.

The Original Cincinnati German Oktoberfest August 26, 27, & 28 Germania Park 3529 West Kemper Road

Friday: 6:00 pm to midnight Saturday: 2:00 pm to midnight Sunday: noon to 10:00 pm

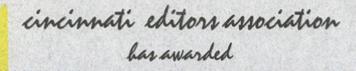

Plenty of free parking at Germania Park. Free shuttle bus from K-Mart on Colerain Avenue.

SAM MARSHALL

2nd place (tie) for FEATURE WRITING Newspaper in the

1995 publications contest