

My practice examines the possibilities within recognizing the intrinsic agency of detritus through sonic and sculptural expression. Processes unfold through an evolving temporality rather than a structured, predetermined composition. Understanding emerges through intuition rather than imposed systems. Finding the signal within the noise is to cultivate a sensitivity to the unattended; to pull the background towards the foreground.