

Jennifer Perry Shingelo
Statement

These drawings are about protection and vulnerability. I imagine structures with thick, impenetrable walls to hide behind and with no entrances or exits: bunkers, shelters, cells, towers. They are delicate paradoxes; the fragility and intimacy of the hair contradicts the rigid schematic representations of the imaginary fortresses. In these strongholds, safety can never be attained.