BUSINESS

SPDI established 1984
phillip schalekamp owner

STATEMENT

SPDI was originally established as a mount making company, one that strives to create armatures of exquisite quality to cradle exhibit art objects and artifacts for museums, galleries and private collectors. Since its inception, SPDI has also provided a wide variety of other services focused primarily around the fields of fine metalworking and fine woodworking.

Currently, SPDI has been contracted as product development engineer for the Denoyer Geppert Science Company, Skokie, Illinois which has been producing anatomical models and charts world wide for nearly a century. SPDI responsibilities include modifying select items in current line of anatomical models, development of new products, and general brainstorming on new instructional/teaching approaches using anatomical models and innovative materials.

Our extensive experience in a great variety of fields including fine art enables us to navigate through projects with a unique approach focused on aesthetics and functionality.
