

Artist's Bio

My name is Wendy Johnston and I am a Multi-Media Artist, alive and gasping for air, in Los Angeles, California. It is my belief, that as a human beings, it is important to embrace the subject of death, as a reminder to live each moment to its fullest. Thinking of our own mortality, truly shakes us to our core. You might say that it is our fear of death that keeps us alive. My works are the dipping of a toe, in the water; they attract the viewer and provide an abject site for a harder conversation. My practice embodies not a resignation to the inevitability of physical decay, but a celebration of the fact that decay has not claimed us yet, and that in this moment there is life and it must be appreciated.